Halliburton Investor Relations Named One of Dallas Business Journal's 2010 Best Places to Work
Ranks Number 12 in Small-Company Category

DALLAS, TEXAS, September 30, 2010 – Halliburton Investor Relations (HIR), a Dallas-based, full-service investor relations firm, announced today its ranking in the Dallas Business Journal's 2010 Best Places to Work, placing number 12 in the small company category. This annual program, now in its eighth year, is a highly sought-after designation. Hundreds of companies in North Texas compete for the honor each year. Companies that earned the Best Place to Work distinction were honored at an awards luncheon last week as well as in the Dallas Business Journal Best Places to Work special publication.

“We’re proud to receive this prestigious designation for the second year in a row,” said Alan D. Halliburton, chairman of Halliburton Investor Relations. “Our employees are what make our company a great place to work. Every HIR employee operates with the highest level of integrity, caring not only about individual work accomplishments, but the company’s reputation and credibility as well. Many companies have only a handful of employees with these qualities. We are fortunate to have an entire team that embodies these traits, and they are the cornerstone of our success.”

The Best Places to Work initiative was created with several goals in mind: to recognize and honor those companies that have created positive work environments; to recognize and share best practices; to promote local employers; and to provide valuable feedback and data to participating companies that will assist them in measuring levels of employee satisfaction and engagement.
